

Tips on post-surgical FUE hair transplant

Want to have a better FUE hair transplant effect, you should at first consult a professional doctor and have an assessment; alike, post-surgical treatment and care are also important, or more important for a better hair transplant effect.

Day 1: Do not touch and wash the surgical area the first night. If possible, cover the head with a hat while going out. On sleeping time, do elevate your head to avoid rubbing off or detaching any of the grafts.

3 or 4 pillows are helpful to achieve an ideal angle.

Day 2 – Day 4: Do avoid touching, scratching or rubbing the transplanted area and exposure under sun for a long period, as sunburn may affect the pigmentation of the skin and also damage the transplanted hair.

Day 5 – Day 7: While on this period, you can shampoo a little longer on the surgical area to make the scabs soften. And you can resume all your physical activities and sports.

Week 2 – Week 4: As hair follicles at this period have entered the resting phase, so it will temporarily start losing hair shafts. Do not panic. Just continue to wash and even dye your hair as you normally do.

Month 2 –Month 3: Do follow the doctor's recommendation and take finasteride, monoxide or any other treatment to minimize shock loss.

Month 4 – Month 6: Do remember to use a strong sunblock SPF 30 while going outside in the sun.

Month 6 – Month 12: As the transplanted hair continues to become thicker and longer from fine baby hair, you can style them the way you desire.

Month 12 – Month 18:
Congratulations to you on the final hair stage and you make a change in your life, Enjoy your new hair.
